WHY STUDENTS NEED COVERAGE

Even as a psychology student or trainee, you can be named in a complaint or claim if a client, supervisor, or agency questions the care you provided. Mistakes, misunderstandings, and documentation issues can all lead to formal action.

Your university or placement site may carry a general malpractice insurance policy, but that coverage is designed to protect the institution first. It may not fully protect you as an individual.

Having your own policy ensures that your interests come first. It gives you access to legal representation and guidance if a licensing board, client, or supervisor raises a concern about your professional work.

WHAT STUDENT COVERAGE INCLUDES

A student policy through Psyche provides:

- Protection for your clinical training work – coverage for professional services provided under supervision or as part of your doctoral program.
- Defense for disciplinary or board actions – up to $1,000 for board proceedings if a complaint arises while you are a student.
- Coverage for privacy and documentation issues – including accidental breaches or confidentiality disputes.
- Access to Psyche's claims team – experienced professionals who understand behavioral health practice and are there to support you if a concern ever arises.

Coverage applies only to professional activities that are part of your approved training or educational program.

PEACE OF MIND AS YOU LEARN

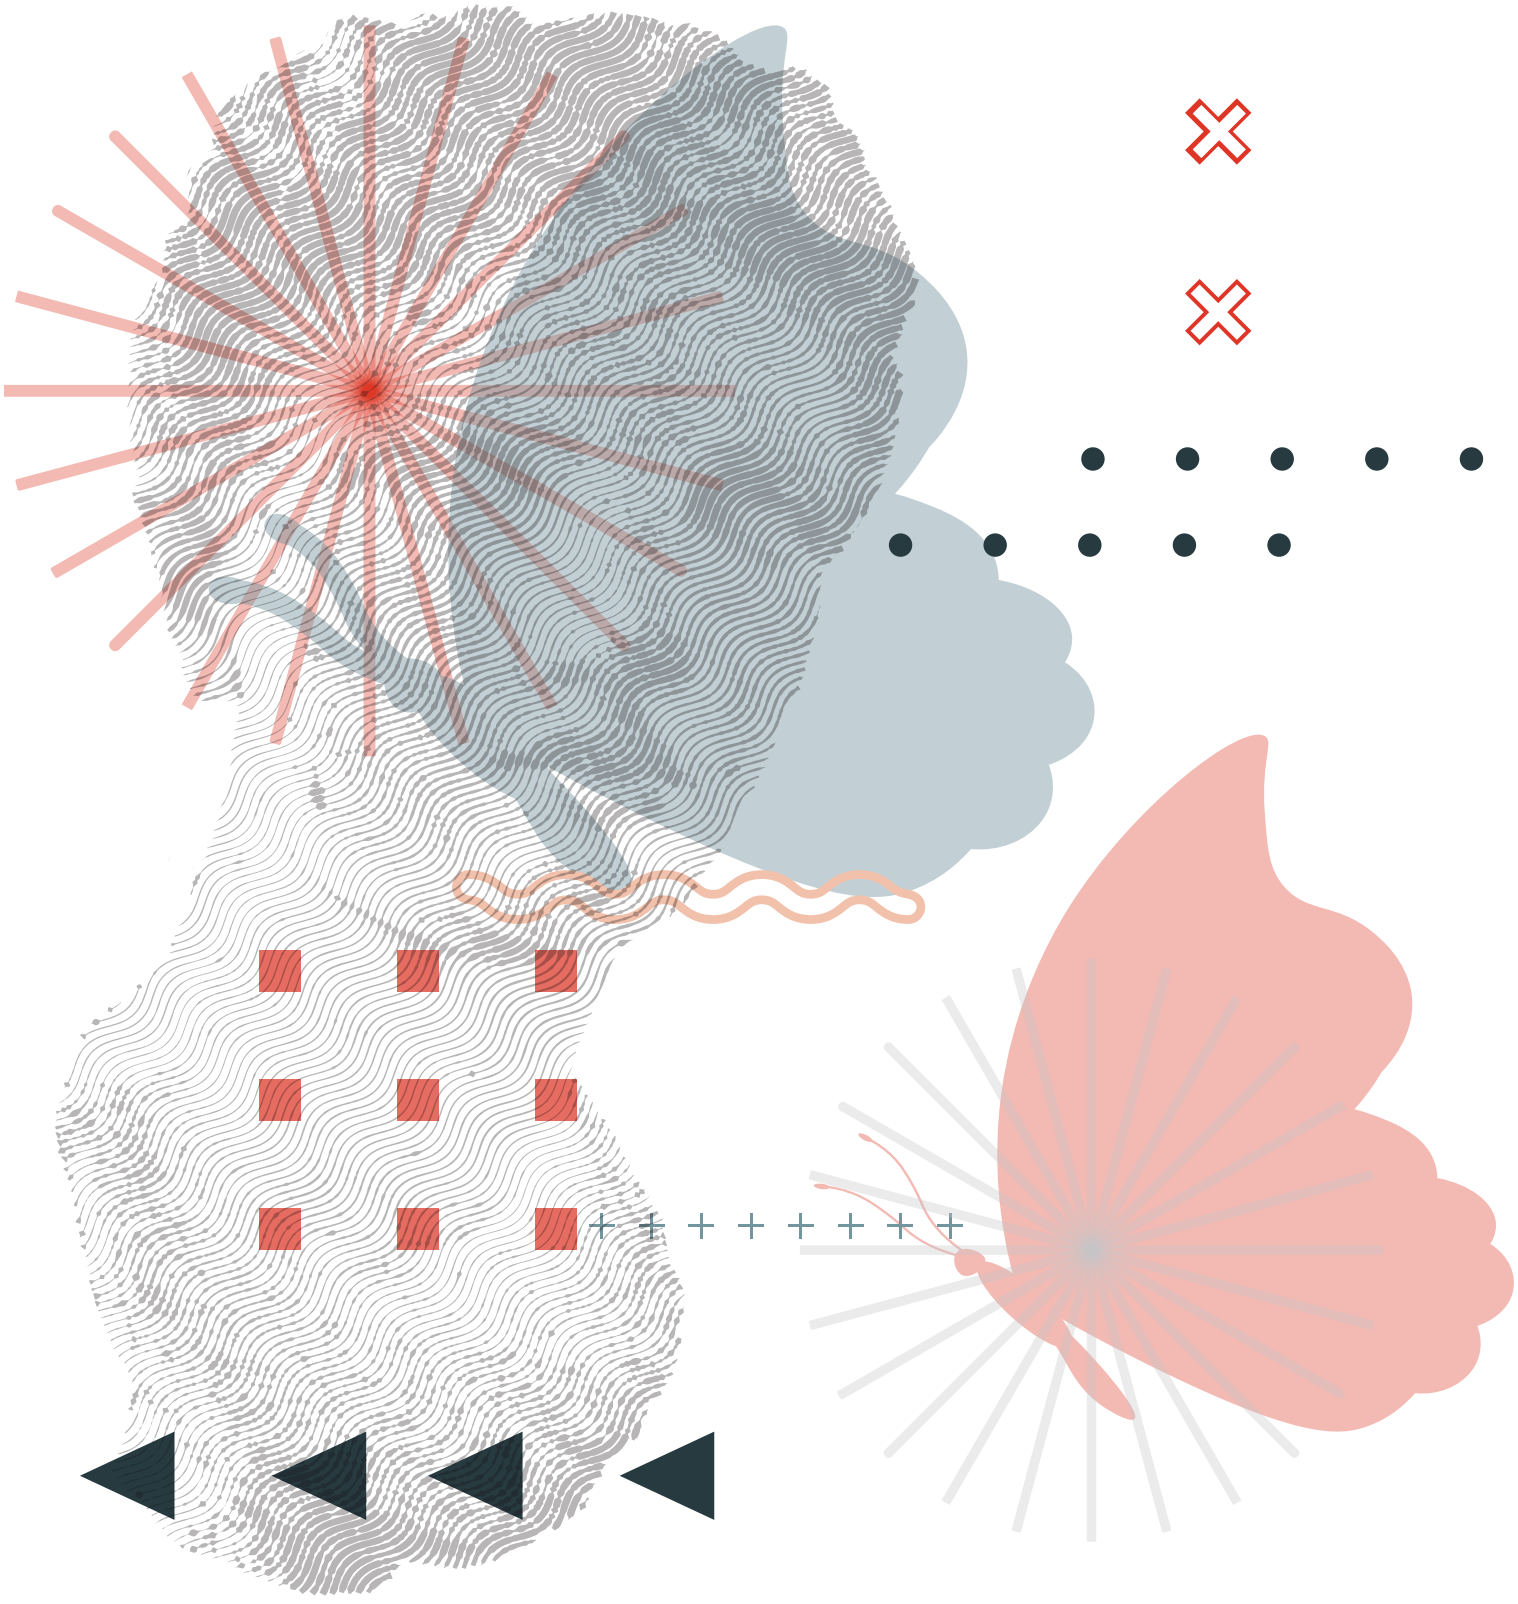

Psychology student coverage is affordable and designed to grow with you. When you complete your program and become independently licensed, Psyche makes it easy to transition to full professional coverage.

Having your own policy helps you focus on learning and developing your skills without worrying about what might happen if something goes wrong.

IN SUMMARY

As a psychology student, you are beginning your professional career. Taking steps to protect yourself now shows responsibility and professionalism.

With Psyche, you can focus on becoming the best clinician you can be, knowing that your training, your reputation, and your future are protected.
